ASSIGNMENTS

Pre-Course Assignments:
1. Reading: Each student will write a 500-750-word reflective paper on each of the four textbooks:
   e. Each student will also write a 500 – 700-word paper on the articles by Karl Tomm on interventive interviewing.
   Value: 40%
   Due on February 11, 2019 (first day of class)

Post-Course Assignments:
1. Post-course writing: Each student will write a case study based upon the following imaginary counselling situation. Mrs. Jones calls complaining that her 13-year-old daughter, Sara, has become unmanageable, and that what used to be a very close, best-friend kind of relationship has become one of constant conflict. Sara is the oldest of 3 children, and has a brother Joe, 10, and a sister, Kathy, 8. Mrs. Jones has been married to Mr. Jones for 15 years. As you work through the steps of the assignment, you may use your imagination to add other pieces of information about the family or individuals to help you write a coherent paper. [If you have an actual case, either an actual counselling situation, or a more informal situation in which you played a helping role that you could write about for this assignment, that would be great, but please see me about making this change. Also, be sure to gain the person(s)' permission.] [It is also possible to use your own family, or aspects of your own story, for this assignment.] The study will include the following elements:
   a. Assessment.
      i. The presenting problem, and how the first contact was made.
      ii. Initial thoughts and curiosity about the case informed by:
         1. Biblical and theological principles and passages
         2. The client's family and cultural background, the family's developmental stage and place in the family life cycle, and other factors that may have a bearing on the counsellor's understanding of the persons involved, i.e., Bowenian family systems theory considerations. Include a genogram.
         3. The underlying "deep longings" and how they show themselves in the presenting problem, i.e., Crabb's psychodynamic considerations.
         4. The family's strengths and resources.
         5. Some further reflections of curiosity.
   b. Treatment plan: Using the maps of narrative practice, describe a treatment plan that you would develop for this client/family. Remember that as a family therapist, you will be concerned for the whole family, and that as a narrative therapist, you will want to use those practices in thinking about the steps of the treatment plan. Include a landscapes map.

Please write your case study using the above outline. The overall purpose of the paper is to treat a case so as to demonstrate competence in understanding and evaluating the problems, procedures, and goals the marriage and family counsellor has and uses in the counselling process.

Length: 3000 words
Due: April 12, 2019
Value: 60%
